The Eisenhower Matrix

Priority Matrix

a task management tool that helps you organize and prioritize tasks by urgency and importance.

About Eisenhower

- The Eisenhower Matrix, also known as the Urgent-Important Matrix, was inspired by Dwight D. Eisenhower, the 34th President of the United States.

I have two kinds of problems,
the urgent and the important.

The urgent are not important, and the important are never urgent.

The Matrix

Explained

Do First.

These are tasks that are urgent and important. Imagine you have a report due by the end of the day. This goes in the 'Do First' box because you need to get it done ASAP!

Important

Urgent

Schedule

These tasks are important but not urgent. Like planning a presentation for next week's meeting. It's crucial, but you don't have to do it right now. Just make sure to plan some time for it.

Not Urgent

Important

Schedule

Delegate

These tasks need to be done soon but not necessarily by you. For example, organizing team files. Maybe you can ask a colleague to help with this one.

Urgent

Not Important

Eliminate

These are time-wasters. They're not urgent, and they're not important. Like spending too much time browsing social media. It's fun, but it can wait until you have more free time.

Some fun activity

Create our own Eisenhower Matrix.

Grab some paper and draw a big square. Divide it into four smaller squares and label them 'Do First,' 'Schedule,' 'Delegate,' and 'Eliminate.' Now think of your own tasks and place them in the right boxes.
